

Steve Isakowitz was sworn in June 1, 2007 as Chief Financial Officer of the Department of Energy after being unanimously confirmed by the United States Senate. As CFO, Mr. Isakowitz plays a vital role in the Department's $27 billion budget that supports important energy, scientific, and national security investments. He has overall responsibility for the Department's financial management, budget formulation and execution, program analysis and evaluation, risk management, and corporate information systems.

Mr. Isakowitz possesses a wealth of experience in both the public and private sectors, having served in key leadership positions at OMB, NASA and the CIA in addition to earlier roles at Lockheed Martin Corporation and Booz, Allen & Hamilton. He is also the recipient of the Presidential Distinguished Rank Award, a top award for executive performance, and an author of a technical book on space launch vehicles.

A native of Cleveland, Ohio, Mr. Isakowitz graduated from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology with a bachelor's and master's degree in aerospace engineering. He and his wife, Monica, live in Virginia and have four children.